TIP... When printing, many people mistakenly believe that the black in the printed image is a solid black, but in actuality, it is simply a lack of ink on the paper. Rather than attempting to create a true black that is in the photo itself, the print company may adjust the print "tones," so you simply have black on the printed page. Do not attempt to create a black when making an image with a web-based photo service or through a digital camera. ## Making Color Changes You can make color adjustments to your image using the Colorize option in Photoshop's Image options. To apply a color adjustment, choose Image⇒Adjustments⇒Brightness/Contrast, or press Ctrl+J (Control+J on a Mac). Make adjustments by using the gray squares on the slider, or by using the sliders to adjust the color values (or `_tint_`) that you want to display in your image. The following figure shows the adjustment applied in the Adjustment and Brightness/Contrast dialog box. The white of the photo has been darkened and the black and red have been lightened so they stand out in contrast. Chapter 5 explains more about adjusting the color in your image. ## Combining Multiple Photos If you take multiple photos of an object, you can combine them to get a good representation of the object.

Production and characterization of horseradish peroxidase immobilized on colloidal silica for use in biosensors. This study reports the production and characterization of horseradish peroxidase (HRP) immobilized on colloidal silica. HRP, a highly catalytic enzyme, was entrapped

by a simple sol-gel chemistry method. The functional activity of immobilized HRP was characterized by using a spectrophotometric assay. Morphology, thermal and pH stability, stability against the organic solvents and substrate of immobilized enzyme were also studied. Enzyme activity increased after immobilization and the activity of immobilized HRP was not affected by the substrate concentration. The thermal and pH stability of immobilized HRP was also enhanced. The optimum pH and temperature for the immobilized enzyme were 7.2 and 40 degrees C, respectively. The optimum substrate concentration for immobilized HRP was determined and found to be 1.3 mM. Two decades ago, the sport of water polo was riding high, largely due to the momentum of No. 10 seed UCLA. The Bruins knocked off the then-No. 1-seeded Creighton, and later lost in the second round to Ohio State. Now the sport is struggling, largely due to slow enrollment at a number of colleges. Athletic directors took note of the water polo team's success in the 1990s, and cited it in support of the sport's "re-nacrtation" in the aftermath of the international scandal at Penn State. Among the developments that followed was the creation of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) in 1997. That led to the creation of the Women's Water Polo Committee. The WPC continues to be the governing body for women's water polo in the NCAA — but that's about it. Several colleges in the U.S. have women's water polo teams, and that number is growing. According to the NCAA, NCAA Division I women's water polo teams were 1,700 for the 2011-12 school year, a 1,200-increase since 2002-03. On Saturday, the Bruins will host eighth-seeded UT-Rio Grande Valley at Avery Aquatic Center. UCLA's team struggled this
